Find inspiration from cities around the world

The Policy Transfer Platform (PTP) is a tool created by the city of Berlin to help share innovative projects among cities worldwide.

With your help, we aim to provide a global resource for urban practitioners, experts and researchers who wish to learn from examples around the world in order to improve their own city. We work with the world's leading urban awards to provide you with a one-stop shop for internationally recognized case studies.

1

FIND INSPIRATION

Save time by finding relevant projects from over 110 major cities around the world using a single search.

2

CONTACT PEERS

Get in touch with more than 120 registered experts directly on the platform and build your professional network.

3

SHARE KNOWLEDGE

Create your own expert profile and contribute projects you've worked on and would like to share.

One place for all city awards

There are dozens of international city awards, but it is hard to find what you need. We unite projects from eight leading city awards and different annual editions. From our 165 projects on the platform, 40% have been recognised internationally.

Crowd-sourced, Shortlisted, Award-winning

While everyone can contribute new case studies to our open platform, we highlight projects that have been shortlisted or won a prize.

Based on voluntary contributions and institutional partnerships, we are aiming to build a comprehensive database of case studies on urban innovation with an active network of experts for you to advertise your interests and skills and to connect with peers in your field.

If you are active in the urban field and want to contribute, we invite you to register and participate! We are also currently seeking institutional partnerships that further broaden the knowledge base of the platform. Join our community and share your feedback, ideas and questions with us at policytransfer@metropolis.org or via the contact form online.
